“There are no innate status distinctions separating the noble and base, the rich and the poor. It is only the person who has studied diligently, so that he has a mastery over things and events, who becomes noble and rich, while his opposite becomes base and poor.”

Fukuzawa Yukichi : An Encouragement of Learning.

“All teachers must go through an academic professional school. Superior education comes from superior teachers who are able to impart knowledge, arouse enthusiasm, and cultivate morality and patriotism among their students.”

Park Chung Hee : Our Nation's Path.

“Investment, to speak technically, could be rationalized. No one would urge the wrong tractors for the underdeveloped country merely because they exist in the America or the Soviet Union. So with education.

John Kenneth Galbraith : Economic Development.

“... Learning is logically necessary to education, whereas teaching is not.”

“We conclude then, that educational processes are these processes of learning, which may be stimulated by teaching, out of which desirable states of mind, involving knowledge and understanding, develop.”

P.H. Hirst and R.S. Peters : The Logic of Education.

“Each generation has its own truth, its own private world, its own way of knowing, and we who are educators would be wise to listen to them for the knowledge they can bring. The young have the supreme advantage of not having been here before; they are not yet settled, they have almost no history and they can consider the world freshly, and they test and retest the ideas that are old and known and reputable. They reject some, they revive and re-create others.

Harold Taylor : The private World of the Man with a book.
